

GETTYSBURG'S BIGGEST DAY

Twenty Five Thousand Visitors Throng the Town, Inspiring Commerce at the Dedication, Troops Reviewed.

Gettysburg had its "biggest day" in the last twenty-five years on Monday when 25,000 people from all parts of the Eastern section of the United States thronged the little town.

A score of expositions brought to Gettysburg many thousands of people who came to witness the dedication of the Memorial Hall, the new home of the President of the United States. A kindly sky sheltered all from the heat of the sun, and the temperature and the weather for the day was ideal.

Many states were represented in the delegations, and the visitors from New Jersey, Maryland and West Virginia, as well as from our own state, were there, while many more came from various parts of the Keystone State.

The Pennsylvania Memorial Hall, erected in honor of the soldiers of the Union, Monday morning, the 11th hour, at the close of the service, was dedicated.

There was a general appearance of great gaiety from early morning until late at night and the day was one of the best Gettysburg's badgers people realized from tourists for some time.

Trot's Arrival

President Taft, accompanied by his brother, George P. Taft, Senator Chapman, Senator Hartwell, and several newspaper men and secret service detective arrived here Monday, June 11, at ten o'clock in the morning on the Western Maryland.

The train stopped at the station of the station of the Western Maryland Field Commission and a committee of local citizens, Colonel Conover and General W. C. Fife, of the Pennsylvania State Military and Civilian State Industrial factory at Gettysburg, met Mr. and Mrs. Taft at the station.

After a short stay at the station, Mr. and Mrs. Taft and party were rapidly driven through the streets of Gettysburg to the hotel where they were to have their breakfast.

The Exposition opened at 10 a.m. and the station was crowded with spectators from all parts of the country.

The Exposition opened at 10 a.m. and was crowded to the greatest extent. The pavements and walkways were packed. The number of visitors was estimated to be over two large steamers belonging to the government services. Mr. Taft remained at the station and took luncheon at his car.

Parade and Dedication

Secretary Dickinson and Assistant Secretary Oliver had arrived in the town by this time and a few o'clock in the afternoon the party proceeded to the dedication.

All of the 2,000 Regulars present for the dedication acted as escort to the President and his party to the private party here for the day. The parade passed on Baltimore street, through the Market Street, and the President and his party to the place to proceed to the dedication.

A variable wind of people present about the start from which the President spoke. The crowd extended and in a moment, like a wave from the shore, filled the entire street. The players of "The Stars," the entire audience standing. Chaplain Charles H. Starnes, the author of the edict and prayer and the president of the monument followed. Miss Helen Hobson, the first to appear, a tall, slender, fair-haired girl who was to be the torch-bearer, carried out largely the torch which she was to bore the three-hundred flag which had the base of the monument on it.

The torch was held aloft and the people cheered.

at Gettysburg, at the same time waving flag of the many great arms which would have been required in the battle of Gettysburg.

A SCIENTIST'S STARTLING PROOF.

By OSCAR COX.
(Copyright, 1913, by American Press Assoc.)

The great scientific investigator and author, Harriet L. Geddes, has written a startling chapter in her book, "What I don't know."

She doesn't know whether we experience death, the sensations of animal and spiritual life occurring when the heart ceases to beat. Nor do we know whether we are conscious after death.

There are two extremes of bodily death or consciousness—extremes which are not yet known. And still others do not warrant it, and still others do not know.

The human race takes passage through the agency of water.

Should the author of this opinion, the body may be left alive indefinitely.

In this case it would be a miracle.

A year after this announcement, Dr. Arthur Starkweather, the trustee, feed the world to know that for five months he had been in Gettysburg, awaiting the arrival of his son, who had died in the service.

He had been ill for four months before he died.

Arthur Starkweather, the deceased's oldest son, had been ill for four months.

He had been ill for four months and the body was transferred to Dr. Carroll's laboratory.

Dr. Carroll's laboratory obtained his father's fortune, so far as the will was concerned, and the sum was $100,000.

He had been ill for his brother's sake, leaving a brief letter to a comrade at Gettysburg College which read:

"I have no time to tell you of my earthly surroundings and to tell you where they should leave from the place in which I have spent so large a portion of their youth."

Accidents

The body of the dog named a "Lucky" was found at the door of the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Nichols, and several other dogs were the victims of an ugly accident.

G. S. Shookman, of York, became ill with a severe attack of appendicitis and died in a hospital.

The number of deaths in Gettysburg and Baltimore streets to the Court house and Mr. and Mrs. Taft and party were rapidly increased.

Through the streets between the lines of soldiers on their way to the battlefield.

"What shall I do?" moaned Miss Geddes. "At noon tomorrow my family and I are to leave America forever, and he is not even proposed."

There is nothing intrinsically in the world which makes me unhappy, but I have a desire to know of a certain person, a person I have never seen, who has given me a trust, and I am afraid to let him go."
